

Meridian's G91 DVD-A launches range

Range of 12 AV products from Meridian is heralded by the launch of a high-end DVD-A player

Proclaimed as its first new product launch for 10 years, Meridian has announced a new range of 12 AV products. The G Series will eventually comprise four variations of disc player (two incorporating pre-amp capability), four products for control and processing, and three power amplifiers for stereo and multichannel use.

The first of the range is the G91 DVD-Audio player, a combined disc player, two-channel digital pre-amp, and AM/FM tuner. This is designed to be connected to either a pair of Meridian self-powered loudspeakers, using the company's proprietary 24/96-capable digital connection (MHR Smart Link), or to matching G Series amplification with conventional loudspeakers. Included with the G91 are video inputs and outputs using component video or HDMI standard (DVI as an extra option), plus analogue and digital audio inputs.

Across the range, the G Series will see new all-metal casework with industrial design by long-time Meridian collaborator Allen Boothroyd, finished in pearlescent silver or black.
